

FOR

Breaking forth like a sudden tempest, he over-ran all, breaking down all the holds and fortresses. Spenser on Ireland.
 The trump of death founds in their hearing thrill;
 Their weapon, faith; their fortresses was the grave. Fairfax.
 God is our fortress, in whose conqu'ring name
 Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks. Shak. Hen. VI.
 There is no such way to give defence to absurd doctrines, as to guard them round about with legions of obfuscate and undefined words; which yet makes these retreats more like the dens of robbers, or holes of foxes, than the fortresses of fair warriors. Locke.
FORTUITOUS. adj. [fortuitus, French; fortuitus, Lat.] Accidental; casual; happening by chance.
 A wonder then it must be, that there should be any man found so stupid as to persuade himself that this most beautiful world could be produced by the fortuitous concurrence of atoms. Ray on the Creation.
 If casual concurrence did the world compose,
 And things and acts fortuitous arole,
 Then any thing might come from any thing;
 For how from chance can constant order spring. Blackmore.
FORTUITOUSLY. adv. [from fortuitous.] Accidentally; casually; by chance.
 It is partly evaporated into air, and partly diluted into water, and fortuitously shared between all the elements. Rogers.

FORTUNATE. adj. [fortunatus, Latin.] Lucky; happy; successful; not subject to miscarriage. Used of persons or actions.
 I am most fortunate thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
 He sigh'd; and could not but their fate deplore,
 So wretched now, so fortunate before. Dryd. Knight's Tale.
 No, there is a necessity in fate
 Why still the brave bold man is fortunate:
 He keeps his object ever full in sight,
 And that assurance holds him firm and right:
 True, 'tis a narrow path that leads to bliss,
 But right before there is no precipice;
 Fear makes men look aside, and so their footing mis. Dryd.
FORTUNATELY. adv. [from fortunate.] Happily; successfully.
 Bright Eliza rul'd Britannia's state,
 And boldly wife, and fortunately great. Prior.
FORTUNATENESS. n. f. [from fortunate.] Happiness; good luck; success.
 O me, said she, whose greatest fortunateness is more unfortunate than my sister's greatest unfortunateness. Sidney, b. ii.
FORTUNE. n. f. [fortuna, Latin; fortune, French.]
 1. The power supposed to distribute the lots of life according to her own humour.
 Fortune, that arrant whore,
 Ne'er turns the key to th' poor. Shakespeare's King Lear.
 Though fortune's malice overthrow my fate,
 My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel. Shakel. H. VI.
 2. The good or ill that befalls man.
 Rejoice, said he, to-day;
 In you the fortune of Great Britain lies:
 Among so brave a people you are they
 Whom heav'n has chose to fight for such a prize. Dryden.
 The adequate meaning of chance, as distinguished from fortune, in that the latter is understood to befall only rational agents, but chance to be among inanimate bodies. Bentley.
 3. The chance of life; means of living.
 His father dying, he was driven to London to seek his fortune. Swift.
 4. Event; success good or bad.

 Our equal crimes shall equal fortune give. Dryd. Innocence.
 5. Estate; possessions.
 If thou do'st
 As this instructs thee, thou do'st make thy way
 To noble fortunes. Shakespeare's King Lear.
 That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh
 To raise my fortunes. Shakespeare's King Lear.
 But tell me, Tityrus, what heav'nly power
 Prefer'd your fortunes in that fatal hour? Dryd. Virg. Past.
 The fate which governs poets, thought it fit
 He should not raise his fortunes by his wit. Dryden.
 He was younger son to a gentleman of a good birth, but small fortune. Swift.
 6. The portion of a man or woman: generally of a woman.
 I am thought some heirs rich in lands,
 Fled to escape a cruel guardian's hands;
 Which may produce a story worth the telling,
 Of the next sparks that go a fortune dealing. Prose to Orphan.
 The fortune hunters have already cast their eyes upon her, and take care to plant themselves in her view. Spektator.

FOR

When mis delights in her spinner,
 A fiddler may a fortune get. Swift.
 7. Futurity; future events.
 You who mens fortunes in their faces read,
 To find out mine, look not, alas, on me:
 But mark her face, and all the features heed;
 For only there is writ my destiny. Cowley's Mistress.
TO FORTUNE. v. n. [from the noun.] To befall; to fall out; to happen; to come casually to pass.

 Beauty lays ope love's fortunebook;
 On whose fair revolutions wait
 The obsequious motions of love's fate. Crahan.
FORTUNEHUNTER. n. f. [fortune and hunt.] A man whose employment is to enquire after women with great portions to enrich himself by marrying them.
 We must, however, distinguish between fortunehunters and fortunefishers. Spektator, N^o. 312.
TO FORTUNETELL. v. n. [fortune and tell.]
 1. To pretend to the power of revealing futurity.
 We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortunetelling. Shakespeare.
 I'll conjure you, I'll fortunetell you.
 The gypsies were to divide the money got by stealing linen, or by fortunetelling. Walton's Angler.
 2. To reveal futurity.
 Here, while his canting drone-pipe scan'd
 The mystick figures of her hand,
 He tipples palmistry, and dines
 On all her fortunetelling lines. Cleaveland.
FORTUNETELLER. n. f. [fortune and teller.] One who cheats common people by pretending to the knowledge of futurity.
 They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd villain,
 A thread-bare juggler, and a fortuneteller. Shakespeare.
 A Welchman being at a sessions-house, and seeing the prisoners hold up hands at the bar, related to some of his acquaintance that the judges were good fortunetellers; for if they did but look upon their hand, they could certainly tell whether they should live or die. Bacon's Apophthegms.
 Haft thou given credit to vain predictions of men, to dreams or fortunetellers, or gone about to know any secret things by lot? Duppa's Rules for Devotion.
 There needs no more than impudence on one side, and a superstitious credulity on the other, to the setting up of a fortuneteller. L'Estrange, Fable 94.
 Long ago a fortuneteller
 Exactly said what now befall her. Swift.
FORTY. adj. [foepepeiz, Saxon.] Four times ten.
